

Alison Paprica, PhD, PMP is the founder of Research Project Management (RPM) www.researchpm.com. She is also adjunct faculty at the University of Toronto where she teaches a graduate student course on strategic project management for research. Previously, Alison was the Director at the Ontario health ministry responsible for up to $60 million annual research investment and Manager of Performance Measurement & Results at the Ontario Ministry of Research & Innovation. Before joining the Ontario public service in 2001, Alison worked in international pharmaceutical R&D for seven years. She has her PhD from UWO and is among the first 7% of the 580,000 people to earn Project Management Professional (PMP) certification internationally.